

SPECIAL ADVERTISEMENTS.

affairs the tendency at present is to deny them a ruling voice in foreign affairs. The organs of Toryism do not attempt to deny that there is a tendency to increase the influence of the Crown over the foreign politics of England. On the contrary they frankly admit the fact, and welcome it as one of the hopeful signs of the present times. The mission of English Conservatism has always professed to be that of guarding the powers of the Crown against popular encroachments, while that of Liberalism has been to strengthen the people, or the aristocracy against those of the Royalty. Fresh the Toryism of to-day is faithful to the traditions of its ancestry. The Quarterly Review, which is as enthusiastically on the Tory side as ever, in an article in the current number, on the Crown and the Constitution, affirms the idea that in dealing with foreign affairs "specially" "the occupants of the oldest throne in Europe, surrounded by a boundless prestige, possessed of a vast if undefined prerogative, and commanding countless sources of influence, could never sink into the capacity of a mere mechanical register of the will of Parliament." "So long," it says, "as the right and honour of the Crown remain intact the Tories have no other less desire to restrict the liberties of the people." Again, we are told that the popular monarchs in England have always been the ones that have been strong in the matter of personal rule, and that "the influence which the Crown exercises over the course legislation is a far less important consideration than its relation to foreign affairs. Further, we read:—"The monarch is at once the head and the arm of the Constitution, and his judgment rests the decision of peace and war, and the movements of the army and the movements of the military and naval forces of the country." In a nation that is so much ruled by the monarch, it is not surprising that the ruling power, but in international doings it must be evident to all reasonable beings that force is still supreme. A Minister of State, as we are informed, is the servant not of the people but of the monarch, and if they are to be true children of their monarch, Englishmen must show that they know how to maintain both liberty and empire by placing full confidence in their Sovereign. From the Tory standpoint both the English people and their representatives in Parliament look the other way, and desire to see the monarch as a foreign agent. That capacity is only held by the monarch, who, in the domestic policy of England, and be governed by the Constitution, but who is the matter of her foreign policy must govern the Constitution.

These utterances give us the true note of Toryism, and they show that, although the English conservative party has changed its name, it has not changed its creed. During the last forty years the control of the Government over the internal policy of Great Britain has been greatly checked by Liberal management. What was Royal Authority up to the reign of William IV.

do the function of Parliament in those colonies where that of giving assistance to the Sovereign, in recent days the functions of the Sovereign have been largely those of giving effect to the decisions of Parliament. The Tories say that this may do at home, but that it will not do abroad. Hence the old question turns up anew,—how far the Crown may go without infringing upon the provisions of the Constitution, and how far the Constitution may go without infringing upon the rights of the Crown. This question, in one shape or another, has recently presented itself in almost every one of these colonies, and is likely to go on doing so. In some instances the Crown has been charged with going too far, and in others with not going far enough. This is the old dissension between Liberals and Conservatives, and is likely to be a dissension which our Liberalism and Conservatism exist in the old sense.

THE GOVERNOR OF FULL—During the absence of Sir Arthur H. Gordon, the Governor of Full, the Government will be administered by Sir John and his Hon. Chief Justice Gorrie will act as High

THE THEATRES.—At the Theatre Royal on Saturday night there was a moderately good house, the piece produced being "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which was very well received. The play was not without its length, and in consequence will be curtailed to-night. At the Victoria Theatre the dramatic season was closed with "Paul Pry" and "Tootsie." To-night the opera season will commence when "La Fanciulla del Tebro" will be presented. There is to-night "Pink Dominoes" will be put on the stage.

MERCANTILE ROWING CLUB.—On Saturday afternoon, a race for maiden double sculls in club ship took place in connection with this club—the crews being the following:—Red, Roy and Roy; Green, Denham and back; the rest, 1, Garvan and Lockery; 2, T. Bull and F. Bull; 3, Jackson and Williams; 4, Fletcher and Henson. The four skiffs were all sent off at the same time, and the Red crew was the first to cross the line.

that their obligation to Mr. Dwyer is in no degree lessened by the amount advanced by him having been repaid. The council had under consideration the report of the committee on the petition for the coming annual meeting, but owing to the present uncertainty regarding the future of the Volunteer Force caused by the delay in the issue of the new regulations, the council have postponed the consideration of the matter until after a few weeks. In the meantime the council will be glad to receive from gentlemen interested in the Association promises of special prices to be completed for the summer season.

THE CHURCH OF THE CONVENT DISTRICTS.—Mr. Macintosh, M.L.A., has received a letter from a workman for whom he had procured a free pass to Bathurst, in order that he might seek for employment, but failed to procure employment. The writer asks if the Council could afford to pay any industrious sober man a good and respectable living, if he were to serve the country in a Bathurst district. The writer looks well as regards age and health, and is a native of the district, and has been a member of the district for many years. The writer speaks highly of the Mr. Macintosh's proposals and speaks hopefully of the future, and this is cheering, intelligence to the cause of the continued immigration that is going on.

THE POWER OF CONSCIENCE.—It was told of a decayed old gentleman, who ended his days in Galamborough workhouse, that being on his deathbed, and desiring that nothing should be known on his mind, he desired the gentlemen that hung the heavy on his bed, to remove the same. They did so, and the gentleman, the reverend gentleman's arrival the mystery was cleared up by the paper telling him that "once upon a time, during a certain common, he saw two men putting down a dead body, and waiting their opportunity to do so. He was so much shocked by the sight that he went and turned the post in an opposite direction, and it had always been a heavy burden on his mind, and he could not think how many unfortunate travellers he had sent to Dismal House."
